since Captain Jack Conselly was promoted to a position in the Police Court the latter has been termed "Connelly's Court," and it is likely that it will bear that name as long as that distinguished person has anything to do with it.

The first female stood up this morning by Captain Jack was old Rosa La Strange, charged with drunkenness. She began making considerable fuss when the Judge ordered the Captain to escort Rosa below. Connelly selzed her by the arm, when she gave an uncerthily yell: "Ye broke me arm! ye broke me arm!" she cried. The Captain loosened his hold instantly, and stared first at the woman and then at the Judge. "Captain," said the Judge, "you must be cereful not to pinch the lady's arms so severely, or a suit for damages against you may follow." Rosa then walked below without assistance, with three months in the Work-house against her.

Elizabeth Brodbeck was the next to step forward and she requested to be sent to the Work-house. "Three months," said the Judge. "I won't take three months," said the Judge. "I' won't take three months," said the Judge of take her down beton, "Captain Connelly, take her down stairs, please."

Litigation in Life Insurance. Life Insurance has come to be recog-nized as a necessity, the advantages of which no husband or father should neglect to secure for those who may be dependent on him.

Doubtless many hesitate to insure their lives by reason of the prevailing sentiment that companies frequently refuse payment of death claims on the ground of some technical error in applications for insurance. This impression arises principally from the fact that the Court reports often show suits against Life Companies, while no publication is made of the thirty millions of dollars that are paid annually without litigation.

We have been at pains to ascertain the experience from the date of organization of the Union Central Life, of this city, which does the largest amount of new business in Ohio of any company, and find that of four hundred and forty-five death claims paid by the Company, amounting to nearly $1,000,000, only three claims under its poli-cies have been resisted through the Courts to final settlement by reason of any mis-statements, errors or omission in the applications made to it for insurance, two of which have been finally decided in favor of the Company, and the other is still in the Courts. In all of the contested cases the policies had been outstanding less than three years, and the Company was fully prepared to prove contemplated fraud in the securing of the policies. This Company was the court of the policies. in the securing of the policies. This Company, in view of its past record and experience, has just taken a very important step in making all its new policies incontestible in case of death after three annual payments by reason of any errors or mis-state-ments in the applications for insurance, except as to age.

No Company is more honorable and just in its dealings than the Union Central, and there is probably no business that, in proportion to its magnitude, is subject to so little litigation as life insurance.
